As teacher educators, we constantly strive to improve our practices so that we can help the teachers we work with improve theirs. A large and growing body of evidence indicates that a particularly good way for all educators to serve their students better is through regular integration of the arts into learning experiences across the curriculum. The benefits of opportunities to learn both in and through the arts can be seen in better understandings of subject matter, increased abilities to think critically and creatively, and enhanced development of personal and social qualities such as persistence in meeting challenges and empathy in relations with others. Moreover, because the various visual and performing arts can serve as alternative “languages” for living and learning, they provide more equal access to a good education and a good life across the full spectrum of diverse learners in today’s schools. (For a current analysis, please see the report from the National Education Association at <http://arts.gov/news/2012/new-nea-research-report-shows-potential-benefits-arts-education-risk-youth>).

While some educators have already made arts integration an important part of their work, on the whole we are falling far short of gaining all the benefits that might come from artful teaching and learning, as the arts are still somewhere on the periphery in many schools and programs. Giving the arts a more central place will require a transformation in the way we educate teachers—a transformation not only in our own practices, but also in our thinking about what we teach, who we teach, and even why we teach. We cannot achieve that sort of transformation overnight, but we can at least start to build up some momentum in that direction.

Toward that end, the California Council on Teacher Education Fall 2014 Conference will enable all participants to explore the power and possibilities of arts integration. For teacher educators who have yet to take their first steps toward arts integration, our goal is to help them get started, and for those who have already embarked on that journey, our goal is to help them go farther. While this is a journey that will pose challenges for all of us, meeting those challenges should prove to be well worth the effort, as we and those we serve are likely to find teaching and learning more rewarding and more enjoyable than before. Moreover, we need not try to meet these challenges entirely on our own, because ample resources are available, and because there are many good people who can help us, including arts educators, leaders in education, funders, and policy makers. So another purpose of the Fall Conference is for teacher educators to learn where they can get help, and for prospective helpers to learn how they can support the needs of teacher educators.

Highlights of the conference will include: a keynote address on arts integration by Professor Merryl Goldberg of California State University, San Marcos; a policy session with statewide leaders in the arts and education; a panel with leaders from schools, museums, and arts organizations; and two Saturday morning institutes on arts integration—one on academic development and Common Core Standards, and one on social development and what we might call “common decency standards.”

Call for Proposals for CCTE Fall 2014 Conference

With reference to this Fall's conference theme, "Transforming Teacher Education through the Arts," the Planning Committee invites proposals for concurrent sessions and poster presentations that will enable participants to look at integration of the visual and performing arts in teacher education from a variety of perspectives including those of:

- Teacher educators who have worked at making the arts an important part of their own teaching;
- Preservice and inservice K-12 teachers who have done the same;
- Arts educators who have worked on arts integration with teacher educators and/or with preservice and inservice teachers;
- Researchers who have examined academic and social learning outcomes from arts-integrated instruction for educators or their students;
- Educational leaders who have promoted arts integration in their schools, programs, or districts.

Collaborative presentations combining two or more of these perspectives would be especially welcome. In addition, proposers are encouraged to plan presentations that are "interactive," in that participants will be engaged in making and/or discussing art as part of a learning experience.

How to Submit Proposals

Proposals must be submitted as Word doc attachments (New Times Roman, 12 pt. font) via email, and include:

- ◆ File of cover sheet which lists the proposal title, names, affiliations, addresses, work and home telephone numbers, and e-mail addresses, along with an indication of whether the proposal focuses on research, practice, or policy analysis, and the preferred session format (poster session or 30- or 60-minute concurrent presentation). (The cover sheet form appears on the next page of this newsletter and is also available on and may be downloaded from the CCTE website; please use that form or a sheet containing all of the same information.)

CCTE Calls for Nominations for Quality Education Partnership Award for Distinguished Service to Children and the Preparation of Teachers

At each Spring and Fall Semi-Annual Conference, CCTE honors a teacher education program which exemplifies collaborative efforts between a college/university and a K-12 school/district. The CCTE Awards Committee now invites nominations (and self-nominations) from programs in Southern California for the Quality Education Partnership Award for Distinguished Service to Children and the Preparation of Teachers that will be presented at the Fall 2014 Conference in San Diego. Nominations of programs in Northern California for the award to be presented at the Spring 2015 Conference in San Jose will be invited this coming fall and winter. Nominations must be submitted via e-mail.

Nominees for this semi-annual CCTE award must reflect collaboration between college/university administration and faculty and K-12 school administration and faculty (individual schools, school districts, or county offices of education) in the planning as well as the implementation of the program to be honored. Eligible programs must have been in place for a minimum of three academic years. Such programs may involve public or private/independent colleges/universities and public or private K-12 schools. Nominations must show clear evidence that, as a result of the program, all partners have benefitted, e.g., children, student teachers, beginning teachers, cooperating teachers, other teachers and/or administrators in the school or district, and college/university faculty.

Nominations must include the following information: the names of the leading participants in the collaborative effort; a description of the school/district/county office and its population; a history of the program, including original goals and/or research questions being addressed; a description of the perceived successes of the effort, including any synopses of evaluative data collected; and future plans for the project.

Nominations must be submitted jointly by the K-12 school/district/county office and the institution of higher education with a statement of verification by the appropriate college/university and school/district officials. Each official named in the document should send a separate e-mail verification statement.

The total nomination document should not exceed five pages.

Please submit nominations by e-mail to: jose\_lalas@redlands.edu

The deadline for nominations for awards to be made at Fall Conferences is August 15 each year, while the deadline for awards at Spring Conferences is January 15 each year
